Message from the Co-Chairs

The significant feature of development of knowledge science is the interdisciplinary program on an international scale. We need to promote the exchange and interaction of knowledge across disciplines and borders to explore the new territories and new frontiers. In the present stage, attempts to strictly define the knowledge science may be too ambitious, but a very tolerant, broad-based and open-minded approach to the discipline can be taken.

Knowledge science and systems science can be used for one another as methodology and tool and benefit each other. Around these disciplines, the first International Symposium on Knowledge and Systems Sciences, initiated and organized by Japan Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (JAIST), was held in September 2000 (KSS2000), then KSS2001 in Dalian University of Technology (Dalian, China), KSS2002 in University of Shanghai for Science and Technology (Shanghai, China), and KSS2003 in South China University of Technology (Guangzhou, China).

This year, the fifth symposium, KSS2004 will be held in JAIST with the support of the 21st century COE (center of excellence) program in JAIST. The COE program is a vehicle to integrate theory and practice, to combine knowledge in social science and knowledge in natural science, to produce new theories, and finally to create a new research field called the study of scientific knowledge creation.

The International Society for Knowledge and Systems Sciences was formally established in the year of 2003 at the International Symposium on Knowledge and Systems Science (KSS2003, November 29-30, 2003, Guangzhou, China). Now, our members spread over ten countries and areas. The overall purpose of the society is to promote development of knowledge science and systems science, as well as collaboration between both of two sciences. It further seeks to encourage research and facilitate communication between and among scientists and professionals from various disciplines and professions at local, regional, national, and international levels.

Co-chairs of the International Program Committee:

Nakamori, Yoshiteru (Japan Advanced Institute of Science and Technology, Japan)

Wang, Zhongtuo (Dalian University of Technology, China)
